art should disturb

Abstract : What is art ? A medium of representation or a philosophy of representation, rather a politics of representation ? These questions lie in a same line but differ within the discourse.

According to a pedestrian or an outsider; posters and hoardings besides the road are the image and form of art in terms of visual art. If we look upon History; Art came before the literature and like literature, art used to work as mirror of society. This representation is somehow decreasing. We can't see any artwork upon social issues but we can see corporate advertisement.

Here is my little initiative of a poster presentation to represent some social issues, because somewhere art should disturb the 'comfort of corporate culture of art interpretation and usage'.
