

Chapter-8

Research Challenges to Overcome

There is no research work in this world, which is without any limitation. This is also true for the present study. The most important limitations which have been listed in this chapter are as follows.

- I. Bench marking on the status of reigning of 'Social entropy' has been really a difficult task.
- II. There were problems of overlapping in some variables that could have been avoided.
- III. Some new scales could have been better if created. Cardinality in measurements has spared.
- IV. Since, it is a very nascent idea, more of conceptual inputs could have been better.
- V. Schedule complexity because of information overlapping somewhere.
- VI. Some of the variables have gone bit homophile in nature. So, this has contributed a fair amount of multi-collinearity characters.
- VII. The study does not include gender, class, community and economic category based research.
- VIII. Since the concept is complex, it was very difficult to get qualitative response.
- IX. Now a day, farmers have become very profession oriented and hesitate to interact and donate information without expectation. That created barriers sometimes to get relevant information unleashed of them.
- X. Some more time and more monetary help could have been devoted to generate crystal information.
