Abstract—The most fundamental issues we face and deal with today is the adjusting the relationship between humans and nature. With the increasing deterioration of ecological systems on which human beings rely and the aggravation of the environmental crisis, human beings have realized that we cannot rely on economical methods alone to solve the problems of ecological imbalance. So, a believe in mind and appropriate attitude towards nature can established a new ethical relationship between human beings and nature. Environmental ethics can played an important role in influencing the growth of ideas and opinions and representing something new in global governance.

Thus, the focus attention in this paper has been on understanding 3 major points. First, the concept of environmental ethics has been taken. Secondly, Environmental ethics can prove to be helpful in building a holistic attitude in society. Lastly, the paper got concluded with the moto of Utilitarianism---“Greatest happiness of the greatest number.”

Key words: Ecological, Environmental Ethics, holistic, Utilitarianism.
